How to be Good Looking

Perhaps no question more serious than - How Can I Improve my looks? - confronts the minds of our fellows Mr Alphons.

And we do not wonder why they should be on the look out for some artificial appliance whereby at least some beauty could be made to shine from their respective countenances.

We cannot dispute the fact that a little personal ^{beauty} along with our admirable literary qualities, will greatly assist us in making a record.

The writer does not presume to be a Dermatologist, but after giving some study to the subject in hand, modestly presents you with the results of his labor, trusting that good results shall occur in no small degree.

The first question he would ask is - Does your head correspond in size, shape and weight with the balance of your members? If not, and it is too large, just have it planed off a little. The expense will be trifling, and the effect remarkable.

If your face is not comely. Buy a new one you can sell your present one at any second hand furniture store and realize a fair price for it. Madam Skull Adjuster is a capital person to consult with regard to your complexion. If you are unfortunate enough to have a rusty complexion. A little vitrol mixed with molasses will change it wonderfully.

For red hair, an excellent dye is prepared by the author, composed of shoe-blackening mucilage and vinegar. It gives the hair a very soft black hue, keeps it from falling out, and produces a fine natural curl, resembling an Indian's hair.

Should you be knock-kneed in your eyes. Take your eyes to a foundry and have them melted up and run out again. It is very seldom that they assume the same ~~of~~ shape as before.

Hair on the lip is certainly a mark of manliness as well ^{as} beauty. Nothing so charms the fair sex as a few natural hairs on a young man's lip.

Now your trouble may be that the hair grows on the inside of your lip. About six hours skating on Peddie Lake with a pretty girl, will soon change their direction. Should you have passed the age when "A Must Not Touch It" should appear on your lip. Just be patient and gargle your throat with clam shells, after meals and it will soon appear.

If your stature is not of sufficient extremity. Why simply start and grow a little more. Should your weight be lacking. Eat a few empty flour barrels with the hoops on. Don't sleep over three quarters of an hour in twenty four. Eat all the tomatoes you can, and what you cant- Can sleep with your feet out of the window. A little cold weather will do them good. Always have the bed clothes under the bed, if you would gain best results. Upon retiring put your pants under the bureau, so they wont get dusty. Hang your shoes up in the clothes closet. Place your socks under your pillow. Always remember to leave the front gate open, so as to have plenty of fresh air. Be sure that the pillows are under your feet, that will keep your brains from settling in them, and destroying your intellect. It will also make your complexion smooth and white.

Never wear false teeth, if you have such ^{articles} better use ~~the~~ them to mark out fancy cakes with. You will obtain as good results.

Never wear a wig. It will make you near sighted, and produce corns on your skull. If you must wear a wig, wear it some where else besides on your head. Never eat eggs, you are liable to become an "egg noster." They also increase the size of your feet and cause your ears to droop. Always clean your teeth with sand, and you will never sport a Zoological Garden.

Now, by following these few directions one's whole anatomy cannot help but undergo a change for the better.

If there is any is anything you do not understand, call at Room A, Second Ave where a personal interview will be cheerfully granted.
